

Partnerships for Wellbeing

Or “Don’t wanna be, all by myself”

Who is this person, and why am I listening to him?

Just some guy – but that's the point

My name is Jeremy, and I'm ~~an alcoholic~~ I work for a Local Authority

This comes with it's fair share of complications

And yet....

More than reminiscence
Hall 10

Learn about recent object handling research in dementia and setting up an object handling group not based on reminiscence. Find out about evaluation tools, the role and approach of a facilitator, and the objects that successful in engaging audiences. Following the session participants can facilitate evidence-based object handling groups for people with dementia.

Chair:
Paul Camic
Professor of Psychology and Public Health, Canterbury Christ Church University

Speaker:
Jeremy Kimmel
Audience Development Officer, Tunbridge Wells Museum & Art Gallery

And a lot more...

But obviously, this would have been impossible without...

Not to mention many seemingly tireless people...

I'm sold! How can we get in on that action?

- Accept one thing: The biggest obstacle to a partnership is you
 - And I mean that in the nicest way possible

It can work. Yes there will be details to work out, and it won't be a perfect relationship right away – but it can work. Start there.

It's not as hard as you think. It's not as time-consuming as you think. It's not as complicated as you think.

You want help? Ask.

Everything is easier when you're not the only one doing it.

This is all easy for you to say, you've done it. Put your money where your mouth is.

Alright, ask me:

Jeremy Kimmel
Audience Development Officer
Tunbridge Wells Museum & Art Gallery
jeremy.kimmel@tunbridgewells.gov.uk

{thank you}